Helping your child with autism thrive tip 1: Provide structure and safety. Learning all you can about autism and getting involved in treatment will go a long way toward helping your child. Helping Your Child Cope with his Sensory Needs. By Lauren Lowry Hanen Certified Speech-Language Pathologist. Have you ever been bothered by a tag in the back of your shirt, feeling desperate to cut it out the minute you return home? Hi there! I love your sight and your suggestions. My son has been in speech for most of his life- in the beginning for feeding help and then starting just after a year for more feeding help and speech... I do many of the things you suggest, but I was wondering what if any different things you would suggest for a child suspected to have a motor ... I wanted to give you 10 speech therapy ideas to do at home because you, as the parent, are your child's best teacher. I am a play therapist (not an SLP), so I work with many speech-delayed children, in conjunction with their speech-language pathologist (birth-age 3) and these activities work great with them in the home, in between therapy ...
